

LENORE MANDERSON, BA (ASIAN STUDIES) (HONS), PHD, FASSA, FWAAS

I am Distinguished Professor in Public Health and Medical Anthropology in the School of Public Health, The University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, South Africa. I joined Wits as a member of faculty in 2014; previously, from 2004-2013, I was an honorary professor and, in 2008, Hillel Friedland Senior Fellow at the university. I am also Visiting Distinguished Professor of Environmental Studies and Anthropology, Institute at Brown for Environment and Society, Brown University, Providence, RI; honorary professor at Khon Kaen University, Thailand; and adjunct professor in the School of Social Sciences at Monash University.

I was appointed to my first tenured full professorship in 1987, at 36, and held the position, as Professor of Tropical Health, University of Queensland, Australia, from 1988-1998. I then the position of Professor of Women's Health, University of Melbourne, 1999-2005, and from 2006-2013, Professor of Medical Anthropology in the School of Psychology and Psychiatry, Faculty of Medicine, Nursing and Health Sciences, and the School of Political and Social Inquiry, Faculty of Arts, at Monash University. I was awarded an inaugural Australian Research Council Federation Fellowship in 2001, and took this up at Melbourne and Monash universities from 2002-2007.

I am internationally known for my work in anthropology, social history and public health. I have played a lead role in training and research in inequality, social exclusion and marginality, the social determinants of infectious and chronic disease, gender and sexuality, immigration and ethnicity in Australia, Southeast and East Asia (including Malaysia, China, Thailand, the Philippines and Japan), the Solomon Islands, South Africa and Ghana. Much of my work with Indigenous and immigrants Australians, and in infectious disease, is applied; this includes developing guidelines for practice to enhance access to services and to provide cultural appropriate services. At the University of the Witwatersrand, I lead a program of work in medical and public health around medical interventions, technology, access and equity, and in this, I work with six postdoctoral research fellows. At Brown University, my work includes a five-year program bringing together the natural and social sciences, humanities and the arts in conversations on environmental change and sustainability. I also teach a course on biodiversity loss, climate change and innovation in the IE/Brown Executive MBA.

I am the author, editor or co-author of some 600 books, articles, book chapters and reports, including Sickness and the State (1996), Surface Tensions: Surgery, Bodily Boundaries and the Social Self (2011), Technologies of Sexuality, Identity and Sexual Health (ed., 2012), and Disclosure in Health and Illness (ed. with Mark Davis, 2014). I am editor and author, with Elizabeth Cartwright and Anita Hardon, of the Routledge Handbook of Medical Anthropology (2016). In recognition of my contributions to research, I was elected Fellow of the Academy of Social Sciences of Australia in 1995 and Fellow, World Academy of Art and Science, in 2004. In 2016, I was elected a member of the Academy of Science of South Africa, and awarded an A rating by the National Research Foundation of South Africa, acknowledging my status as a leading international researcher.

I have trained to graduation over 150 higher degree students and mentored dozens of others in Australia, South Africa and elsewhere; reflecting this achievement, I was awarded the American Anthropological Association, Medical Anthropology Students' Association Mentor Award in 2007, and the Vice Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Postgraduate Supervision at Monash University in 2013. In 2016, I received the AAA, Society of Medical Anthropology Career Achievement Award; this award honors an individual who has advanced the field of medical anthropology through career-long contributions to theory or method, and who has been successful in communicating the relevance of medical anthropology to broader publics. I was President of the International Association for the Study of Sexuality, Culture and Society (IASSCS 2001-2003), chairperson of the Program Committee and a member of the Board of Trustees of the World Academy of Art and Science 2010-2011, and member of the steering committee for a project of the Academy of Science of Australia on population, equity, climate change and sustainability. I was a member of the TDR Scientific and Technical Advisory Committee (STAC) (2012-2016). I am presently a member of the Scientific Working Group on Vectors, Environment and Society (2015-2017); the Social Innovations in Health Initiative (2015+) of TDR; and the Scientific Working Group of the WHO Kobe Centre (SWG/WKC, 2017+). I am Chairperson of the Scientific Advisory Group of SEACO (Southeast Asia Community Observatory), Monash University Malaysia, 2014+. Since 2010, I have edited the international journal Medical Anthropology: Cross-Cultural Studies in Health and Illness, and in 2016, I initiated a new series Medical Anthropology: Health, Inequality and Social Justice for Rutgers University Press.

MAJOR COLLABORATIONS

Collaboration with WHO/TDR

Since 1988, I have collaborated with TDR (UNCIEF/UNDP/World Bank/WHO Special Programme for Research and Training in Tropical Diseases) as a Temporary Adviser and committee member. I was a member of the Steering Committee of the TDR/SER (Social and Economic Research Programme) 1989-1993; the Research Strengthening Group (RSG) of TDR 1990-1993; the Applied Field Research Steering Committee (TDR/AFR), 1994-1996 and the Task Force on Gender and Tropical Diseases, 1994-1997. In 2000, I participated in a scientific meeting on Social, Economic and Behavioural Research, and from 2000-2004 was a member of a new Steering Committee for Social, Economic and Behavioural Research. In 2007 I chaired a Scientific Advisory Group meeting for TDR. I was a Member, Scientific Advisory Committee for Stewardship on Research on Infectious Disease of Poverty (SAC-STE), 2008-2011, which was responsible for producing the Global Report for Research on Infectious Diseases of Poverty (2012): the work included regular meetings in Geneva, a Stakeholders Consultation meeting in Shanghai (January 2011), mentorship of a Research Fellow involved in the production of the report, and writing, advice and editing as required.

I belonged to TDR Scientific and Technical Advisory Committee (STAC) (2012-2016); Scientific Working Group on Vectors, Environment and Society (VES, 2015-2016); and Social Innovation in Health Initiative (SIHI, 2015+). I chaired a committee on Research Collaborations for Social Innovations in Health,

WHO/TDR, 2016. In 2017, I was appointed to the Scientific Working Group of WHO Kobe Centre, Japan. I have supervised to graduation 14 PhD Fellows for TDR, from China, the Philippines, Thailand, Laos, Cambodia and Myanmar (Burma). I continue to mentor several and have provided informal mentorship to many others. Specific activities with TDR include:

Scientific Working Groups and Steering Committee membership

Scientific Working Groups, Geneva, 1988, 1990, 2000, 2006; Steering Committee for Social and Economic Research, 1989-1993 (meetings in Geneva, 1989; Cairo, Egypt 1989; Chiang Mai, Thailand 1990; Geneva 1990; New Haven, USA 1991; Saly Portudal, Senegal 1992; Choroní, Venezuela 1992; Geneva 1993; Research Strengthening Group, Geneva, 1990-1994; Applied Field Research: Planning Committee, Geneva, 1993; Steering Committee, 1994-1996; Task Force on Gender and Tropical Diseases, 1994-1998 (meetings in Annecy, France 1994; Morogoro, Tanzania 1995; Pune, India 1996; and Johannesburg, South Africa 1997; Steering Committee for Social, Economic and Behavioural Research, Geneva, 2000-2002

Special Scientific Meetings

Forest malaria, Chiang Mai, Thailand, 1989; Community participation and the control of tropical diseases, Brisbane, 1989; Rapid assessment procedures for tropical diseases, Baroda, India, 1991; Advanced research methods, Yale University, 1991; Community perceptions and rapid assessment of schistosomiasis, Saly Portudal, Senegal, 1992; Women and tropical disease, Oslo, Norway, 1992; Meeting to design the impact of the Health Workers for Change Manual, Morogoro, Tanzania, 27 November - 1 December 1995; Radio activities in the Healthy Women's Counselling Guide, Annecy, France, 29-30 May 1996; Gender issues in the elimination of leprosy, Pune, India, 26-28 November 1996; Informal meeting to prepare protocols for operational research on the Health Women's Counselling Guide, Ottawa, 13-15 November 1997; Final meeting on multi-country study of the impact of Health Workers for Change, Johannesburg, South Africa, 1-5 December 1997

Research Methods Training and Institutional Strengthening

Women and Tropical Disease: qualitative research methods training and protocol development, Cairo, Egypt (1989), Accra, Ghana (1990), Noguchi, Malawi (1991); Social science methods and protocol development, China (February and November 1990); Bi-regional Fieldlincs Conferences, Manila, The Philippines (1989), Brisbane, Australia (1990), Pattaya, Thailand (1991); other Fieldlincs meetings: Bangkok (1990), Morong, The Philippines (1991), Bangkok (1991), Jogjakarta, Indonesia (1991); Social Science and Health Research Workshop (Brisbane, 1991); Rapid Assessment Procedures for Social and Cultural Aspects of Malaria (with Dr I. Agyepong, Epidemiology Division, Adabraka Polyclinic, Ghana), 1992-4; Rapid Assessment Procedures for Tropical Diseases, Research Institute of Tropical Medicine, Manila, The Philippines, 22-31 October 1995

Fieldlincs, Co-ordinator, 1990-1991. WHO/TDR provided funds for the biennium to (i) develop and maintain a network of field researchers in tropical disease research in the SEARO and WPRO regions, (ii) provide technical advice to particular research projects, (iii) fund small projects to support junior researchers to encourage social science, epidemiological and related research, and (iv) organise bi-regional meetings (Brisbane, September - October, 1990, and Pattaya, Thailand, October 1991) and smaller country workshops and training seminars in The Philippines, Indonesia, and Thailand.

Collaboration with WHO Kobe Centre

I worked with WHO Kobe Centre to develop its program on women's health and leadership. I was keynote speaker at the 2nd international conference on women's health and leadership (Canberra, April 2001) and chaired plenary and committee sessions at the 3rd Conference (Kobe, April 2002). From 2002-2003 I convened the 2nd Taskforce undertaking work under the 2002 Plan of Action, supervised research and report writing relevant to this task, convened co-ordination meetings of the work of the three taskforces, and participated in the preparatory work for the 4th conference (Dar es Salaam, April 2003). I was chief investigator of a project funded by WHO/Kobe to develop checklists and guidelines to enhance women's empowerment and leadership in health. As noted above in 2017 I was appointed to the Scientific Working Group of the Centre.

INSTITUTIONAL CAPACITY BUILDING

I worked closely with the Research Institute of Tropical Medicine (Manila, The Philippines) and the Faculties of Nursing and Public Health, Khon Kaen University (Thailand) from 1988-1998. I continue to work with Khon Kaen University (Thailand), providing support to the Faculty of Nursing for its PhD program, co-supervising and mentoring Thai doctoral students and their PhD supervisors. As a component of my Federation Fellowship research program on chronic disease and disability, my Australian colleagues and I worked closely as collaborative researchers with Department of Allied Health Sciences, University of Malaya, The Faculty of Nursing, Khon Kaen University, the Faculty of Medicine, National University of Laos, and University of Medicine (1), Myanmar.

Through appointment as Honorary Professor, University of the Witwatersrand, 2004-2013, and particularly as Hillel Friedland Senior Fellow in the School of Public Health in 2008, I worked with colleagues to develop a doctoral training program, supervised PhD students, and provided mentorship to colleagues. I joined Wits in 2014, as Professor of Public Health and Medical Anthropology, in order to increase my input into and to more effectively support the university in building capacity in the region. I currently (2016) supervise 8 PhD and masters students and 6 Postdoctoral Fellows, and I direct a new postdoctoral program in the School of Public Health designed to mentor and support early career researchers at the university. I also provide support and training for supervisors of higher degree research students.

CARTA

With Wits colleagues, I was a named applicant for funding for the Consortium for Advanced Research Training in Africa (CARTA) program. CARTA is an African-led and implemented program of nine academic and four research institutions from west, east, central, and southern Africa, which provides a collaborative doctoral training program in population and public health, supplemented by activities to strengthen research infrastructure and capacity. Training reflects the variety of disciplines essential to enhancing health, wellbeing and livelihoods in Africa, and necessary to build and sustain multidisciplinary research capacity in public and population health. I am involved in CARTA, through training students in workshops, supervision, and training PhD supervisors from consortium member institutions. I led curriculum development for Joint Advanced Seminar I in 2009 and 2010, and led Monash's involvement as a northern partner from 2009-2013. As a member of faculty now at Wits, I am actively involved in CARTA through participating in advanced (residential) seminars, supervision of students, and supervisor training.

CONFERENCES, SEMINARS AND INVITED LECTURES

I organised several conferences while co-ordinating the WHO/TDR Fieldlines Programme (above), and organised or was an expert participant at other WHO/TDR training workshops and scientific meetings. I organised/co-organised several national and international scholarly meetings: Women in Asia Workshops (Sydney, 1979; Canberra, 1985); Australian Anthropological Society Conference (Sydney, 1981); Women and Food Conference (Sydney, 1982); Symposium on Hot and Cold Food and Medical Theory, International Union of Anthropological and Ethnological Sciences Congress (Vancouver, Canada, 1983); Malaysia Society Colloquium (Canberra, 1985); and a Symposium on Industrialisation and Development, ASAA Conference (Sydney, 1986). I organised several short courses and symposia including Qualitative Methods Course (Brisbane, 1988); Women, Health and Development Seminar (Brisbane, 1991); the Social Science and Health Research Workshop (4 weeks, Brisbane, 1991); and co-convened biannual 3 week training courses on Research Methods and Community Interventions in HIV/AIDS 1993-95.

Conferences, seminars and related activities from 1988 are set out in Annex II. They include the following scholarly meetings which I convened: International meeting on Sexual Violence Against Women, The University of Melbourne, May 2000; Biennial Conference of the International Association for the Study of Sexuality, Culture and Society, The University of Melbourne, June 2003; Transitions: Health and Mobility in Asia and the Pacific, Monash University, 24-26 June 2007; Convenor, Educating health professionals for public health challenges in a global world. Joint Conference, Monash University, University of the Witwatersrand and King's College London, Muldersrift, South Africa, 22-24 October 2008; Co-organiser and facilitator, Crossing Cultures, Countries and Curricula, Monash Malaysia, Sunway, 14-16 September 2009; Co-convenor, 40 South: Social and Natural Science Perspectives on Environmental Extremes, Stress and Distress, Torquay, 8-10 October 2009; Co-convenor, APRFN Conference, Beliefs Beyond Borders: Conversion, contemporary pilgrimage and the transport of faith in the early 21st century, Monash University, 11-13 December 2009; and a workshop on Health, Wellbeing and Families of Care, University of the Witwatersrand, 10 April 2015.

At Brown University, I am responsible for a five year program under the banner Earth, Itself that supports collaboration at interdisciplinary, national and local levels (see <https://www.lenoremmanderson.com/earth-itself/>). Thinking the Earth: Interdisciplinary Conversations on Stewardship of the Commons, Brown University, 23–24 April, 2015, was the first of this series. The second event, held from 28-30 April 2016 – Atmospheres: Science, art and the air that sustains us—brought together sound ecologists, social and biological scientists, policy makers and artists in a program that included site specific and mobile sound installations, performance, lectures and seminars, and concert on the theme. What Fire Does (19-28 April 2017) was an interdisciplinary exploration of the productive, creative, destructive, and transformative powers of fire, included two weeks of lectures, panel discussions, presentations, fire arts, and performance. Water's Edge (2018) will include an academic program, poetry and performance in the US and South Africa, working with South African and US artists and academics.

RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

As summarised below and set out in my list of publications (Annex 1), I have published extensively. My Google Scholar metrics are as follows: Citations 8202 (total); 3636 (2011+); h-index 44 (28 for 2011+); i-10 index 216 (123 for 2011+). My RG score is 41.91 (September 2016). My research in anthropology, history, sociology and public health is as follows:

Political and historical research, Malaysia. Research in Malaysia and Singapore (1974, 1976-7, 1978-9, 1981, 1982, 1986) related to my doctoral work on women and politics (1974-1977), food, nutrition, and reproduction (1978 +), and contemporary and historical aspects of health services and health status (1981+). Archival research in the UK (1982, 1983, 1984, 1992) related to this latter interest. My book Sickness and the State. Health and illness in Colonial Malaya, 1870-1940 (1996) derived from this work and integrated social and material history, historical epidemiology and demography in an account of disease and changing health status in the Straits Settlements and Malay States of British Malaya.

Sexuality, gender and women's health. I have convened a number of meetings internationally on gender and sexuality (including UCLA, 1990; American University, 1995; AAA double session, 1995), as well as nationally. I was a member of the WHO/TDR Taskforce on Gender. I am a founding member of the International Association for the Study of Sexuality, Culture and Society (IASSCS, from 1997) and President, 2001-2003; and convened the biennial conference of the society in Melbourne in 2001. I collaborated with the Global Forum for Health Research to hold an international meeting on gender and sexual violence, leading to the establishment of the Sexual Violence Research Initiative (www.svri.org).

I have worked on reproductive and sexual health, gender and sexuality from 1974 to present, with work conducted in Australia with immigrant, Indigenous, and other Australian-born women. Australian-based studies in recent years have included research on reproductive health with women from Sahel Africa and Middle East; the impact of day surgery on women from new communities; understandings of gynecological cancer diagnosis and treatment among women from diverse backgrounds; and lay understandings, diagnosis and management of chronic gynaecological ailments. My work in this area continued with an ARC Linkage grant with a network of non-government organisations, on access to contraceptive technologies among immigrant and refugee women. I have published and edited several collections in the areas of sexuality and public health policy, HIV/AIDS, and sex and gender in Asia and the Pacific. I continue to publish in this field and to supervise doctoral students in the areas of sexual and reproductive health, HIV/AIDS, and sexuality in South Africa.

Australian and immigrant studies. Research in Australia (1979+) includes collaborative studies with the Vietnamese community on infant feeding; the Turkish community on women's work, reproduction and production (1980-83), and education and occupational mobility (1989-90); and with Australian-born women on pregnancy and mothering (1982- 1987). From 1995 to 1999 I was a co-investigator of the Australian Longitudinal Study on Women's Health, funded as a collaboration of the University of Newcastle and the University of Queensland. The UQ component focused on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Island women and immigrant women (Filipinas and women who had migrated from Bosnia and Herzegovina). Other work included studies on barriers to and appropriate delivery systems for breast and cervical cancer screening and breast cancer diagnosis and treatment among Aboriginal and Torres Strait Island women (endorsed by state government and recommendations provided basis of strategic plan); the effects of ethnicity and culture on cervical screening; development of a manual for mental health needs assessments for non-English speaking background communities; development of ethnic community profiles for health providers to improve quality of care; development of guidelines for the care of in-patients from diverse ethnic and cultural backgrounds; checklists for cultural assessments in clinical settings; and training workshops for Indigenous health workers in women's business. I have worked on diabetes and depression, complementary and alternative medicine, and social impact of amputation including with immigrants, since 2003. From 2008-2010, I led a study on parenting, transnationalism and social capital among Iraqi and Cambodian communities, and am a partner investigator on contraceptive technologies (see above). Other Australian research is set out below (Chronic Disease and Disability).

Nutritional anthropology. In 1978-79 I conducted research in Peninsular Malaysia on traditional medical theory and dietary practice; and in 1980-1982 on breastfeeding and changing infant feeding practices. In Australia, in 1979-1980, I worked collaboratively on Vietnamese medical theories and dietary practices. I was involved in research in Japan (1988-1990) in a whaling village in northeast Honshu, which assessed the social and cultural impact of the cessation of coastal whaling. A number of doctoral students have worked in topics related to infant feeding and nutrition, and continue to do so.

Infectious disease. From 1988, I worked closely with WHO/TDR and other agencies on neglected tropical diseases, and consequently worked in collaboration with Chinese colleagues in Shanghai, Haikou, Beijing and Jiangsu, participating in training workshops, supervising doctoral students, supporting research and co-publishing on schistosomiasis and malaria. With colleagues from the Health Research Unit, Ministry of Health, Ghana, I undertook field research in Ghana in 1992 for the development of the Malaria Manual; and supervised the field tests and evaluation of the manual in Ghana, Uganda, The Cameroon, and China (1992-1994). I undertook research on malaria in collaboration with Research Institute of Tropical Medicine, 1994-1999, to develop and evaluate community-based methods for controlling malaria. The project, conducted in Morong, Bataan and Tayabas, Quezon Province, aimed to increase early case detection and treatment, to develop training and improve IEC delivery to support the volunteer program, and to develop health education for delivery by volunteers. Research in Agusan del Sur, Mindanao, the Philippines (1995-2000), emphasised prompt diagnosis and treatment of malaria; I oversaw the rapid assessments to develop baseline data and to design a comprehensive multimedia IEC strategy. With doctoral students, I have worked on schistosomiasis, dengue fever, malaria, and tuberculosis. Through my present links with U Wits and UCT, with TDR, I am contributing to research and interventions in the field of social innovation for health to enhance the effective delivery of health care and sustain primary health care programs.

Chronic Disease and Disability. For the past 18 years, I have focused on chronic conditions, including comorbidity, disability and chronicity, to contribute substantially to understanding how, in different cultural, social and economic settings and under different, more immediate circumstances, embodied experience, ideas of the self, and social relationships and their meanings, are revised and restructured as a result of changed health status, impairment, and marked corporeal change. I have undertaken collaborative research in urban and rural settings in Australia, Thailand, Malaysia, Myanmar and Lao People's Democratic Republic, Solomon Islands and South Africa, and supervised graduate students also in India and Indonesia, on cultural models and community understandings of disability; access to care and adherence to medical advice; complementary and alternative medicine and practitioners; patterns of care and social integration of people with disability; and social support, social networks and family care giving, among other areas. My current interest is firstly, on the cultural logics of 'treat to prevent', which addresses the use of monitoring and intervention technologies, access to care and the management of risk. Secondly, I am interested in and conducting research on social changes, household structure and caregiving in South Africa.

Climate Change and the Environment. I am increasingly supervising students and publishing in the field of climate change, environment and biodiversity. I was a member of the steering committee for an ARC project of the Academy of Science of Australia on population, equity, climate change and sustainability, result in a three-volume publication on this topic. My work with Brown University, as Director of Earth, Itself, focuses on these questions, and brings together the creative arts, humanities, and social, biological and physical sciences in a range of activities designed to enhance interdisciplinary conversations.
